It is my privilege to write this letter of recommendation for Emma Newell. I have known her throughout her time as an undergraduate at The Ohio State University, while serving together on committees and as an advisor to a student organization of which she was a member.

Emma is an extraordinary young adult whose perseverance and commitment is evident in her endeavors. She is organized, confident, and concerned about the world in which she lives. I was with Emma at an international conference in Canada where she interacted with more than 500 youth and adults. These positive efforts resulted in an invitation to join a small, representative group of delegates who had the opportunity to meet with Canadian Prime Minister Justin Trudeau to discuss global youth issues. She also played an important role at OSU in organizing a first-ever professional development conference and youth summit focused on LGBTQ+ issues.

I have every confidence that Emma will offer her motivation, diligence and talents to her post-graduation education and look forward to seeing the impact she has in the future.

Sincerely,

Sally A. McClaskey, M.A.
